Lindsay Sharman appointed Retail Newsagent Editor

Lindsay Sharman has been appointed editor of Retail Newsagent in a move that will result in improvements to the magazine's news and features coverage.

Lindsay joined the magazine this week from Retail Express where as news editor she has developed a high profile in the convenience grocery industry.

Reporting to editor-in-chief Guy Campos, she will be responsible for day-to-day editorial operations.

"Independent retailers are doing a fantastic job for their local communities across the UK and I look forward to helping them provide better services, improve their profits and compete with the multiples," Lindsay said.

"Independents have the major share of newspaper sales and I am determined to help the newspaper and magazine industry grow in a challenging environment."

Mr Campos said: "In two years with Retail Express, Lindsay has broken exclusive news stories, developed strong relationships in the convenience channel and improved editorial processes on the newspaper."

"Under her leadership, we are confident that Retail Newsagent will energise independent retailers and help them build sales in the face of increasing competition from multiple retailers."

Prior to joining Retail Express, Lindsay worked in trade communications in the grocery sector and as a journalist on a local newspaper group in Kent.

"Retail Newsagent has an impressive heritage with a strong team of journalists and I'm looking forward to working with them to improve the magazine even further," Lindsay said.
